Nashik, Maharashtra, 2025: A distinguished professional gathering organized by the Indian Institute of Architects (IIA), Nashik Centre celebrated excellence in urban design and planning, recognizing significant contributions toward the creation of people-centric, sustainable, and inclusive urban environments.

As part of the event, the Principal Architect of Shilpi Architects and Planners and Chairman of the IIA Pimpri Chinchwad Centre was honoured in the Urban Design and Planning category for contributions to the built environment and ongoing efforts in shaping meaningful public spaces.

The programme also featured a comprehensive presentation of projects undertaken by the firm across diverse scales and sectors. Guided by the philosophy of "Happy City, Happy Home," the presentation explored the relationship between quality urban environments, vibrant public spaces, and enhanced quality of life.

A wide spectrum of projects was showcased, including urban design initiatives, public realm developments, landscape architecture, residential planning, institutional projects, cultural spaces, and community-oriented developments. The presentation highlighted an integrated design approach that balances functionality, sustainability, aesthetics, and user experience while responding sensitively to local context.

The event provided a platform for professional dialogue on urban transformation, placemaking, and the evolving role of architecture in creating healthier and more livable cities. Through the sharing of completed and ongoing projects, valuable insights were offered into how thoughtful planning and design can positively influence communities and contribute to long-term social impact.

The recognition reflects a continued commitment to design excellence and innovation while reinforcing the importance of architecture and urban planning in shaping the future of cities and communities.
